About Margaret Clark

Margaret Clark (1884–1950) was one of Australia's earliest and most imaginative illustrators of fairies, flora and storytelling scenes. Drawing inspiration from the bushland she knew as a child, her work celebrated the gentle beauty of Australian native plants, animals and the quiet magic of nature.

Working at a time when most fairy art followed European traditions, Margaret's illustrations stood apart, bringing a uniquely Australian sensibility to the genre. Her compositions often featured gum-blossom wings, fireflies and native flowers with a charm and detail that make her work both playful and timeless.

With the Federation Fairies Collection, her vision is now being restored and shared with a new generation.

About the Australian Museum of Design

The Australian Museum of Design preserves Australia's design legacy and shares it with the world. Its growing archive holds more than 10,500 hand-drawn surface designs by Australian artists of the 20th century, many of them never seen publicly until now. Each work is carefully digitised and restored so the artist's original intent remains intact.
